

Fall Color = Extraordinary Photo Opportunities

Cold rain and gray skies on October 23rd did little to deter a small group of photography members from taking part in an early morning shoot; they reveled in it and used it to striking effect. Shutterbug parents with raingear-clad tots--encouraged, perhaps, by the write up in Seattle's Child Magazine--have also been snap-happy visitors lately. The garden is still boasting magnificent ambers and reds, so come capture your own magic if you haven't already--and share your results with us on our Facebook page! Photo by Aurora Santiago

2014 Maple Viewing Festival Draws 1,100 Visitors

The sun shined only intermittently, but enthusiastic visitors came in a constant stream all day on Sunday, October 12. Kids busily identified the various species of maple trees throughout the garden as they engaged in a scavenger hunt that challenged even their parents. Others made beautiful pressed leaf cards, tried their hand at Japanese Calligraphy, followed the Roving Ronin through the garden, and relished in the high-intensity Taiko performance that closed the 2014 event season with dramatic flair. We heartily thank all the volunteers who worked hard to make this event a success.

We were named one of "8 Great Spots for Fall Color and Kid Photos" by Seattle's Child Magazine. We couldn't agree more!
